

CODE OF CONDUCT AND RESPONSIBLE PRACTICES OF THE
GRUPO ARANIA

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

The ARANIA Group began life in 1940, during difficult times, as a small stamping workshop in the street Botica Vieja in Bilbao, which my grandfather founded with his friend Estefanía. The original project was small and humble, but here we are still going strong 75 years later, a third generation taking the project forward.

It has been a slow and very laborious evolution during which, obviously, we have changed a lot.

Although the connection with the world of steel processing has always been present, those beginnings bear little relation to the current project, as you would expect. But I would like to think that what has persevered through all this time is the “spirit of the ARANIA Group”, a special spirit based on people and their ability to solve problems by working hard. Austerity, industry and responsibility, with high doses of boldness, have been the values that have sustained our development and have forged the Group’s culture.

We have always been clear that it is not only our products that are in competition but also, and more importantly, the corporate culture that is behind them and leads to their production. Our value proposition to the market is therefore based on a culture, and that is the key that will allow us to differentiate ourselves and prosper.

At one time it was believed that a good balance was sufficient protection against bad times. But as we have seen, there is no balance that can withstand a long and deep crisis. Companies of all sizes and balances have suffered greatly, because of a failure in the management of intangibles, because of the absence of a corporate culture founded on values shared by the people who work in them and of a management model that provides support in a sustainable way.

This has not been the case with the ARANIA Group, where thanks to our management model and by working on the management of culture and values, in recent years, coinciding with one of the worst crises that I can remember, we have rebuilt the foundations on which our Group rests. We have left behind once and for all an industrial paradigm based solely on the management of productivity and cost and we have shifted to another where our focus is on value-added management. Making people the cornerstone of our work, internationalisation, diversification, innovation and operational excellence are the pillars on which our new model is built. This change is allowing us to lay the foundations for a new and exciting business reality.

With this CODE OF CONDUCT AND RESPONSIBLE PRACTICES we take another step forward in our policy of defining and disseminating the company culture that identifies us. With it we formalise in writing the values that we propose to respect and that in the long-term will ensure our reputation and the trust of our customers, suppliers, employees and society in general.

And only then, on the basis of excellent corporate governance practices and true to the long-term vision that should characterise us as a family business, can we build a bridge to take us forward into the future, towards a position of leadership in Europe.

PRESENTATION

The ARANIA Group this year celebrates the 75th anniversary of its establishment in 1940.

And we are now at a point within this long history that can be defined as the culmination of a process of transformation and cultural change that was initiated ten years ago.

And precisely during this last year we have worked hard to analyse, structure and design a value proposition built around our identity and corporate reputation, identifying our best practices to incorporate them into a code of conduct.

Our long-term vision focuses our efforts on creating a relationship with the customer based on quality and the generation of shared value; an alliance that should endure regardless of economic cycles or difficult situations like those we have experienced during the economic crisis.

This creation of loyalty is a challenge in which the people who make up the ARANIA Group constitute the base on which our entire strategy of sustainable growth is built.

The markets are also becoming increasingly demanding with regard both to the quality of our products and services and also to the way we produce them and the quality of our processes.

It is at this point that Corporate Social Responsibility – the equilibrium between our legitimate right to generate wealth and the use of practices that are economically, socially and environmentally sustainable – brings a differential value to our identity and reputation, and helps us to identify and respond to the requirements and expectations of our Stakeholders: the people who make up the ARANIA Group and our customers – the basic engines of our sustainability and competitiveness – and partners and public and social institutions with which we interact.

Corporate Social Responsibility is therefore a strategy that we assume in a voluntary way and from a deep conviction. But it also has an operational role that will allow us to respond more efficiently to the needs of our customers, who demand from us a clear and documented statement of our position regarding our sustainable practices.

Nor can we forget the institutions, which are progressively incorporating Corporate Social Responsibility as a selection factor when it comes to the support of initiatives or investments aimed at improving competitiveness.

In this context, and to give a unified response as a Group to the inevitably differing perceptions about our values and commitments, we have drafted a document that represents a definition of our identity and culture.

We have called this document the CODE OF CONDUCT AND RESPONSIBLE PRACTICES OF THE ARANIA GROUP and its aim is to strengthen ties with Stakeholders based on a clear statement of our values and commitments: the way in which we carry out our business activity. In no way do we understand the Code of Conduct as an instrumental document, either as a declaration of intent or as an apparent improvement in the social sphere with respect to our Stakeholders.

Neither is this Code of Conduct the result of improvisation, to suddenly declare the we are socially responsible in the face of a socio-economic environment where companies that have pursued short term success as the main strategic challenge have taken precedence.

«This Code of Conduct represents the reference framework that all those who make up the ARANIA Group will commit to and that we will translate to our customers, suppliers and partners.»

We will also make it visible to our competitors in a spirit of free competition based on transparency and honesty, and where sustainability is regarded as a driving force in our local, national and international environment.

Finally, the Code of Conduct and Responsible Practices is not just another step forward in the progress of the ARANIA Group but is instead a key milestone, because we also see it as the fruit of the effort and commitment of all the people who since 1940 have worked and work for the ARANIA Group to remain an industry benchmark in the context of advanced management models.

SCOPE OF APPLICATION

This Code of Conduct implies an obligation of compliance for both personnel within the ARANIA Group and also for those who have a professional relationship with the Group companies.

The considerations included in this document will be taken into account in contractual relationships with personnel but will not serve to modify the existing relationship.

The management will establish the identification and implementation of operating procedures consistent with the corporate values of the Group.

For this purpose:

- ▶ The Code of Conduct will be distributed to all personnel so that they are informed of its contents.
- ▶ All personnel will be required to commit to compliance.
- ▶ The Code of Conduct becomes the reference document regarding both internal and external practices of personnel for the carrying out their role in the ARANIA Group. The content of this therefore prevails over other internal rules, provided that these do not establish a higher level of requirement than the Code of Conduct itself.
- ▶ The Code of Conduct does not override existing legislation, whether regional, national or legislation that applies in each of the countries where our activity is being carried out.

IDENTITY AND CORPORATE REPUTATION: OUR VALUES

Our identity and corporate reputation is supported and defined by the following VALUES that characterise us and shape our actions, both internal and external:

HONESTY

► Integrity of approach

The strategic approach of the ARANIA Group is based on respect for, and compliance with, the regulations and people's rights, proscribing transgressive strategies or dubious practices.

► Transparency

The organisational culture is based on communication and the provision of information to our Stakeholders from a perspective of maximum transparency.

The only limit we impose involves the need to preserve the confidentiality of information that might endanger our organisation.

COOPERATION

► Inclusion

Our strategic planning identifies, analyses and incorporates the recommendations and expectations of our Stakeholders.

We pay special attention to the people who are part of our organisation and to our customers and suppliers, who we consider as allies who form an integral part of our strategic decisions.

RESPONSIBILITY

► Promote sustainable practices

The ARANIA Group is committed to the identification of processes that could cause a negative impact on the environment and promotes activities to reduce this impact to minimum levels or that prevent it from occurring at all, depending on its origin and the existence of valid alternatives.

► Monitoring our behaviour

Management ensures sustainable development involves compliance with current regulations and trust in the people working for the company, the customers and suppliers. In addition, we have established the post of the CSR Coordinator, who is responsible for monitoring and evaluating the sustainability of the practices in the organisation and for proposing any corrective measures deemed appropriate.

► Risk prevention and safety at work

Risk prevention and safety at work are priorities for the ARANIA Group, and their management is driven by individual behaviour, with supporting training, advanced equipment and processes geared towards the highest possible workplace safety.

CONTRIBUTION

► Relationship with the environment

To support the creation of value in our environment, within a recruitment policy that respects the principles of equality, skills and abilities, and supporting cultural initiatives to the extent that available resources allow.

COMMITMENTS

The Responsible Practices of the ARANIA Group are manifested through a series of commitments both to our Internal Stakeholders, especially the people who make up our organisation, and also to those outside the company but who have a relationship with the company or participate in our operations.

These commitments are backed by the identification and implementation of procedures that favour their real and effective implementation.

- ▶ Avoid and reject actions which provide a customer and/or supplier with an advantage or benefit in a way that jeopardises the principle of free competition, in exchange for any kind of compensation.

EXTERNAL COMMITMENTS

The expectations, recommendations and requirements of External Stakeholders form a very important part of our decision making process.

Their expectations, recommendations and requirements are collected and analysed and responses provided through adequate channels of communication.

CUSTOMERS

- ▶ Communicate and disseminate the Code of Conduct to all customers as a commitment to sustainability by the ARANIA Group.

- ▶ Adapt the ARANIA processes to the socio-cultural diversity that working in international markets entails, attempting to respect local customs such as holidays, religious festivals or other events of special importance.
- ▶ Reject business proposals that are not acceptable to the ARANIA Group either because it is not possible to provide the high quality that the company demands of itself or because they involve the distortion of free competition through the receipt of unregulated compensation, in the form of commissions, gifts or gratuities from the customer.
- ▶ Guard confidential information generated in the business relationships with our customers in an effective way and ensure that it will not be used against them and their interests.
- ▶ Spread the culture of sustainability to all the customers as part of the relationship and the generation of value within a strong collaborative partnership.

SUPPLIERS

- ▶ Communicate and disseminate this Code of Conduct to all the suppliers as a commitment to sustainability by the ARANIA Group.

- ▶ Certify the suppliers by incorporating, as far as possible, criteria of sustainability, such as the source of raw materials, respect for human rights and anti-corruption measures.
- ▶ Monitor, through follow-up questionnaires, the level of sustainability achieved by each supplier. In the case of negative behaviour concerning the respect for human rights, compliance with the regulations governing the protection of the environment, health and safety at work or the hiring of minors, consider terminating the relationship with that supplier.

COMPETITORS

- ▶ The ARANIA Group competes in both the domestic and international markets in compliance with the different regulations that ensure free competition and avoid price control, allocation of markets or abuse of a dominant position.
